BICYCLIST HIT BY BOB GOELET'S AUTO.

On His Way with Party to the Football Game He Runs Down a Young Man on a Bicycle, Inflicting Severe and Probably Mortal Hurts.

Brother of the Duchess of Roxburghe Figures in Sensational Accident While Under Swift Headway and Unable to Check Speed of Flyer.

(Special to The Evening World.)
BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 21.—Robert Goelet, a brother of the Duchess of Roxburghe, figured in a sensational automobile accident at noon to-day, and as a result a bicyclist, who was run down by the big red machine, may die.

Mr. Goelet and a party of friends, riding in his auto, were making good speed down Commonwealth avenue on their way to the football game. Near Massachusetts avenue the automobile ran into a bicycle owned and ridden by William Anderson, twenty-five years old, of No. 108 Pine street, Cambridgeport. The bicycle was smashed and the rider run over by the automobile, the speed of which could not be checked.

Mr. Goelet jumped from the machine as soon as it was stopped and helped pick up the wounded bicyclist, who was carried into a drug store and attended there until an ambulance took him to the City Hospital.

Anderson's left thigh, left wrist and right forearm were fractured and his abdomen was lacerated and bruised. It is also thought he sustained internal injuries.

Mr. Goelet gave his name and address to the police, and after expressing regrets at the accident and saying he wished that everything possible be done for the injured man, he climbed back into the auto and with his friends went on to the football game.

One of the occupants of the Goelet automobile was Arthur Iselin, son of C. Oliver Iselin, the yachtsman.

LESTER WALLACK'S OLD HOME BURNED

Was Occupied by H. W. Leroy, Wealthy Retired New York Merchant—Mrs. Leroy Was Forced to Leave from Window.

(Special to The Evening World.)
STAMFORD, Conn., Nov. 21.—A fire which was caused by a defective fuse destroyed the historic home of the late Lester Wallack, at Wallack's Point, to-day, entailing a loss estimated at $100,000. The place was occupied by H. W. Leroy, a wealthy retired New York merchant, who recently spent $25,000 remodeling and beautifying it.

The fire started about 1 A. M., while Mr. and Mrs. Leroy, two maids and a butler were sound asleep. It was discovered by employees in the Stamford Manufacturing Company near by. The factor whistle was used to give the alarm. Its blasts awoke one of the maids. She hastened downstairs and alarmed Mr. and Mrs. Leroy and the other inmates. The house was filled with stifling smoke. Mr. Leroy and the others managed to escape in their night clothing by a rear staircase. Mrs. Leroy started to put on some clothing and tried to save her diamonds and other jewels.

When she turned to leave the room the smoke and flames drove her back. Cut off from escape, she opened the window and leaped from the second story. She fell heavily on the frozen earth, 20 feet below, and was picked up delirious from pain and fright. One of her legs was badly sprained. This afternoon her condition was serious. Stores of costly imported furs, silverware and a priceless collection of books were lost in the fire.

SIXTH RACE—Circus (7 to 1) 1, Sheriff Bell (5 to 2) 2, Highlander 3.

BENNINGS RACE-TRACK, Nov. 21.—The attendance at Bennings this afternoon was the best of the week, there being strong attractions in the shape of the Consolation Stakes for two-year-olds and the Chevy Chase steeplechase, a run over the timber with gentlemen riders to guide the horses. These two races lent tone to the day, and some of the best sport of the meeting was seen.

The Consolation brought out a meeting between Lord of the Valley, half brother to Lord of the Vale, who won this stake last year, Reliance, Orthodox, Gratiola and Robin Hood.

The weather was a bit raw, but not unpleasant, the track in excellent shape.

YALE'S VICTORIOUS ELEVEN AND CAPTAINS OF TWO TEAMS.

SPECIAL EXTRA. SHIP'S CAPTAIN OVERCOME BY FIRE IN HOLD

There was a fierce blaze on the Old Dominion steamship Monroe, from Norfolk, which came into port this afternoon. The fireboat New Yorker fought the blaze after the ship was warped into her berth. The fire started about 8 o'clock yesterday morning while the Monroe was off Atlantic City.

Capt. Hulphers and Mate Crowley were twice so overcome by the smoke that they had to be taken from the hold.

SCION OF WEALTH DIES IN A CHAIR

Nephew of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt Expires in a Cheap Lodging-House in Newark After a Tour of Conviviality.

William V. Kissam, who is connected with the house of Vanderbilt collaterally and consanguineously, was found dead to-day in the Planters' Hotel, a cheap lodging-house, at Mulberry and Canal streets, Newark.

Kissam, in the company of Dr. Paul D. Thorne, began a tour of conviviality last night, but lost heart about 9 o'clock in the evening. They then went to the Planters' Hotel and after a short while lodgings. Thorne retired at once, but Kissam displayed signs of stubbornness and preferred the uncomfortable posture of sitting upright in a chair. He was found at daylight in the same chair.

Nephew of Mrs. Vanderbilt.
Kissam was a maternal grandson of the late Commodore Vanderbilt, and a nephew of the late Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt. At the latter's death she left him a legacy of bonds of the New York Central Railroad, and it was on the income from these that he lived. He was always supplied with money, which he spent freely.

He came to Newark three years ago to take the gold cure at the Keeley Institute on Park place, and there met Dr. Paul D. Thorne, who was one of the house staff. The two became attached to one another, and after a short while became inseparable companions. This attachment eventually ruined Thorne professionally, and some time ago he took cheap lodgings at the Planters' Hotel.

Kissam's mother lived in Jersey City, and a sister resides in Paterson. County Physician McKenney says that Kissam's death was due to excessive drinking and the use of morphia.

Kissam a Vanderbilt Connection.
The name of Kissam is an important one in the family of Vanderbilts. William V. Kissam, a nephew of William K. Vanderbilt, and a grand-nephew of Commodore Vanderbilt, came before the public in 1899 in a suit for separation against his wife on the grounds of abandonment.

Mrs. Lolla H. Kissam, the wife, retaliated, claiming that her husband was an habitual drunkard and that it was impossible to live with him. On every point raised during the proceedings the referee who heard their domestic troubles decided in favor of the wife.

The evidence tended to show that during the five preceding years Kissam spent much of his time in institutions devoted to the cure of the liquor habit. The evidence showed that Kissam would return home repeatedly in a staggering and maudlin condition, rifle his wife's personal possessions and then leave her for another orgy of drink.

Kissam's Wife Was Divorced.
After trying the Keeley cure Kissam begged his wife to allow him to return to his home. She then forgave him on the promise that he would reform. For a few days his penitence kept him from the vice that had been his undoing. Then he broke loose again. The outcome of his suit was a separation granted to the wife and Kissam was forced to pay alimony. His only income was from a fund of $25,000 left him by his uncle, William H. Vanderbilt.

SOLDIERS' FIELD, CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 21.—Yale's gritty gridiron warriors won a hard-fought victory from the crimson pigskin knights of fair Harvard this afternoon.

Massive walls of humanity, forty thousand strong, hemmed in the white-barred battlefield and cheered on the sturdy boys in blue and crimson.

It was a Yale day. The sons of Old Eli were strong favorites in the betting, the game was almost conceded to them, and thousands upon thousands of Yale rooters woke the echoes with yells for the knights in blue.

That defeat at the hands of the Tiger rankled in the breasts of Eli's sons and seared its way into their memory as they tore and ripped the Harvard ranks to bits. Harvard's work was erratic; brilliant at times, then woefully ragged. C. Marshall made two desperate attempts at goal from field in the first half, but failed both times.

At that Harvard's game was much stronger than had been expected.

RECORD-BREAKING CROWD OF 40,000 SEES STRUGGLE.

Built on the plan of the old Coliseum of Rome is Harvard's stadium. As the structure stands now it will seat more than 34,000, and on another part of the field was another stand which held something like 4,000. And there was not a vacant seat when the twenty-two gridiron warriors dashed out on the field to begin their fight to a finish. There were no "thumbs down" when the giant went down in a melee, as used to be the rule at
